WRITTEN, AFTER AN ABSENCE OF SEVERAL YEARS, BY AN OLD CITIZEN. YEARS, BY AN OLD CITIZEN.
A goodly sight, this southern view
Of forces a fields, and buildings new;
Water, islands, rough rocks abound,
White distantly the fails resound.
Manchester, queen of bridges, seen
With virias white and gurdens green.
Looks pleasing as a bridging id's head
With nearly and emeralds oversnroad. With pearls and emeralds overspread.

There rolls the James, with harvests crowned And white-sailed ships; there mills are found. Here rushing come, there thuncering go, The loaded cars—a leagthened row; And furnaces and foundries glow—A lively scene of busy life.

Machinery's power, and clushing strife.

Delightful square! How green the trees, How deep their shade, how cool the breeze; What dively birds—some strike my ear With sounds that I'm unused to hear! Twitt'ring, chirping, and flying 'round; Now on the trees, n, w on the ground; Ye warblers sweet, your tuneful throats Led by the mock-bird's thousand notes, so wondrons and si wild, That all su dued, by mu-ic wooed, I w.ep. as though a child! I weep, as though a child!

Virginia: On this lefty site,
Massive and grand, thy state-house s'ands;
Near by it clustered on the right.
A c'assic group, in bronze, commands
Thy p-opl-'s love, the stranger's praise,
As on their fronts they fondly gaze—
Thy sons, first born—the nobless men
That e'er swayed sword or wielded pen!

Yonder, slone, stands Henry Clay, Yonder, slone, stands richty Cay,
Keneath that neatly pillared domeThe tatesman leader of his day;
The Union was his sacred home;
His voice was like the ocean's roar,
Resistless as its waves his sway.
In hot denate and fiery fray!
Alas! he'll lead us never more.

Mother of States thy bosom bleeds Mother of States thy bosom bleeds
While yet the world rings with thy deeds!
Cheer up, thy flag still proudly flies;
Thy foot stamp-down old tyrannies.
Virginus, great and grand shall bu
Thy teachings and thy destiny.
Dry up thy to rs; thou yet shalt see
Another group sorrous dirg Lee,
The Windston's fit company. For Washington's fit company.

Slow sinks the sun; his light expires,
Yet lingers it on yender spires;
So the great deeds of noble sires
Glow in our hearts with lessing fires.
Now the tweet breath of flowery June
Gives welcome to the starry noon,
And night's far queen, the radiant moon.
Once pleasant watks—how sad to me
That now no longer here I see
Those lovely forms, with voices sweet
And soft as ange's when they greet.
What charming wit, what humor queer,
What see timeats reflaced we'd hear!
Cold marble tells where now they lie,
And points its upward to the sky!

Sometimes I see them in a dream— How beautifut, ) ow fair they seem; Celestial grace beams to each face, The light of heaven their dwelding place. My step is slow, my locks are gray;

My step is slow, my locks are gray; And soon R too, must pass away; Ye loved, ye desse d, then may I meet And hole with you communion sweet; Our harps attune our authems raise. And join the hests of neaven in praise To Father, Spirit, and fiely Son, The great "I Am"—the Everlasting One!

To the Editors of the Dispatch: Can't you republish this ode of Praed, for gone"?

[Yes. Here it is:] MARS DISARMED BY CUPID.

Aye, bear it hence, thou blessed child, the dire the bur en be The dire the bar on be.

And hide it in the pathless wild,
Or drown it in the sea.

The rutbless uninterer swears and prays,
So let him swear and pray:
Be deaf to all his caths and prayers,
And take the sword away. We've had enough of firets and camps,

Guns, glories, odes, gazettes, Triumphal arches, coored lamps, Huzzas and epauleties. We could not bear upon our head nother lenf of he That horrid Buonaparte's dead : Yes! take the sword away.

We're weary of the noisy boasts That pleased our patriot througs, We've long been dull to Gooch's toasts, And tame to Diodin's sougs: We're quite content to rule the waves
With all a great dl p'ay;
We're known to be extremely brave, Vereknown to be extreme. But take the sword away.

Let Portugal have rulers twain: Let Greece go on who none: Let Popery sink or swim in spain, While we enjoy the fun, Let Turkey tremble at the knout, Let Algiers lose her tiey : Let Parls turn her Bourbons out: But take the sword away.

Our honest friends in Parliament re looking vastly ead: Our farmers say, with one consent, It's all—luminensely bad. There was a time for borrowing, But now it's time to pay: A bucget is a s rious thing,to take the sword away.

And oh, the bitter tears we wept In those our days of fame; The oread that o'er our heart-strings crept The oreal that of the traine.

With every ost that came.

The home affections waged and lost in every far-off fray.

The price that British glory cost!

Ah! take the sword away.

We've plenty left to holst the sall, Or mount the dangerous breach; And freedom breathes in every gale That wancers round our beach When duty bids us dare or die, We'll fight another day: But till we know the reason why, Take, take the sword away

Buffalo Springs' Letter.

BUFFALO LITHIA SPRINGS, ? MECKLENBURG COUNTY, Va., July 27, Editors Dispatch: This admirable summer resort has so increased in popular favor as to attract a much larger concourse than has gathered so early during any previous season. Many needed improvements have been mide since Colonel Thomas F. Goode, the present enterprising and popular proprietor, took possession, and now the reputation of the place is rapidly increasing not only in Virginia, but also in the States of the sunny Southland, Already this season Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, and Atabama bave been represented. Among them have been men of eminence and large culture from several States. The tide is constantly turning, and so here there has been a constant coming and going. Some came early, and have left; others are coming fater, out can stay only a and are at once alterative and tonic. Of the cures wrought by these waters some are simply marvellous. There is here now the lady of one of your prominent citizens, who a place on her bed, and who in less than three weeks was on the ball-room floor participating in the Terpsichorean art with all the exuberance of youth. The Buffalo pamphlet shows many testimonials from the west authority of the excellence of these waters.

The fare is mevery-sense first-class, and gotten up in "Old Virginia style"-a thing, by the way, which is becoming more rare as the years pass by. The Robber System in Italy.

Recently an article was published in one of the Boston papers reporting the increase of brigandage in Faly. Perhaps the following extract from a letter in the Opinione, a newspaper published in Italy, may show some reasons for this increase. The writer is Prefessor Pasquale Villari, a reliable authority, and well known in Germany and Italy through his "Life of Savonarola," lately pubthrough his "Life of Savonaroia," lately published. Villari has been writing a series of RICHMOND COLLEGE, letters giving very vivid pictures of the condition of the peasantry in South Italy-a condition whose equal can searcely be found in any country of Europe, and is a heavy accusation against the Government The Colle which in the fitteen years of its existence, during which time it has loaded the population there with the severest burdens, and used and abused its power in the suppression of the well-organized robber system, has yet never found time to do anything for the improvement of the lot of the poor peasant. Villari, himself belonging to the Goverument party, is forced to acknowledge that the peasant in South Italy is in a worse condition than ever before. He has been speaking of some immense agricultural districts, extending many miles and where the laborers' families live in small villages at a great distance from the farming lands. We make andria. Va.

the following extract from his description: "The peasants who cultivate this large territory remain there almost the whole year through, coming only every fornight or three weeks into the villages to see their families. In the country they are lodged in a targe apartment on the ground floor of the house. Here they sleep in niches hollowed out in the walis. They have for a bed only a straw sack, on which they sleep in their clothes, for they never undress. An overseer has charge of them, who, in the name of the proprieto:, deals out to them in the morning a loaf of miserable black bread, weighing about two pounds. Such a peasant works from sunrise to sunset; at 10 o'clock in the morning he rests a half-hour and eats a piece of his bread. In the evening, when the work is over, the overseer sets a large kettle on short time. And set others will come in the fire which is kindled in the per-August to remain till chilling frosts come to sants' room; in this kettle water, with remind them of cheery homes and win- some salt, is boiled. The waters are purely mineral, overseer pours the hot salt water and a few drops of oil over the broken bread. This is their only soup the whole year through, and is called aqua-sal; they never receive any more nourishing or hearty tood, except in summer or two age was brought to this burvest-time, when one or two litres of an interior wine are given them, that they may not become exhaus ed under their severer labors. Yet these peasants lay aside daily a portion of their bread, which they sell or carry home for the support of their families. Their yearly pay is about 132 tranes; also, a certain quantity of corn and beans (about one and a half or two bushels) which falls to their share at barvest.

Such a fearful condition of things explains the fact that many in despair turn to brimagnificent royal statiles, of which new ones sums of money; also, the hunting expeditions, the splendid displays of fire works, and the costly jewelry presented to famous ballet dancers and other favorite women of pleasure."
